POINTS IN POLITICS

When the executive committee of the Nebraska league of republican clubs turned down Mr. Rosewater's application for a place on the delegation from this state to the national republican league convention held in Cleveland last year, there were some republicans who thought that action not justified. They claimed that while Mr. Rosewater had opposed some republican candidates he was still a republican. Those who were against Mr. Rosewater's selection maintained that the editor of the Bee was not a republican and could not be depended upon to support the republican candidates whenever his malice or private interests dictated otherwise. This being so, it was unwise, in their opinion, to select Mr. Rosewater as a representative of the party. It is no secret that at this time when Mr. Rosewater was trying to get recognition from the executive committee of the league so as to be brought into closer relations with Presidential Candidate McKinley at the Ohio convention, he was laying the wires to secure an undisputed dictatorship in the republican politics of Douglas county. It was stated in his behalf at the committee meeting that Mr. Rosewater was endeavoring to harmonize matters in Douglas county, and that the recognition by the committee would help out that endeavor. By harmonizing it was meant that he was trying to gain absolute control. In view of recent events the refusal of the committee to make Mr. Rosewater a delegate was certainly wise. In the campaign in Douglas county he opposed every republican candidate, men against whom there could be no possible objection. It is gratifying to know that at least one body of republicans in Nebraska had the independence to stand out against this man who has on almost every occasion exerted himself to secure the defeat of the republican ticket. To the republican league of Nebraska belongs the credit for the first real rebuke the party has administered to the editor of the Omaha Bee.

Mr. Bryan in the World-Herald of one day last week had an interesting editorial on "A House Divided Against Itself." In it he said: "A majority has a right to rule both in the country and in the party. The policy of a party should be determined by a majority of that party and the voters will not be satisfied with anything less if they appreciate the right and privileges of citizenship." This idea of Mr. Bryan's is sound. The majority of the party certainly ought to dictate the policy of that party, and in this connection Mr. Bryan's attention is called to the vote of the democratic party in this state at last week's election. For Mr. Phelps and free silver the democrats of the state cast, in round numbers, 7,000 votes. For Mr. Mahoney and sound money, the democrats of Nebraska cast, in round numbers, 14,000 votes. It would hardly be possible to secure a more definite expression of the will of the democratic party in this state, and it would seem that if Mr. Bryan and his colleagues in the free silver wing of the party appreciate the rights and privileges of citizenship they will be satisfied with this expression.

Investigation discloses the fact that The Courier was mistaken in saying as it did last week that the Standard, a sensational illustrated newspaper in New York had published a picture of two young women of this city, one an employe of Herpolsheimer & Co., and the other a student of the state university. The error was annoying to the employes of Herpolsheimer & Co. and the students and we regret exceedingly that the mistake occurred and that innocent people should have been done an injustice.
